NEW YORK, July 3—Various rumors which have been circulated concerning the safety of the valuable contents of the national library of Paris are satisfactorily disposed of by a correspondent of the Tribune, who has visited the buildings and made the necessary inquiries. The Commune did not disturb any of the treasures of the library.

EASTERN STATES

Excitement at Hudson, N. Y.

HUDSON, N Y, July 2—The excitement at the Cathedral in this city has increased to day. This morning members of the parish to the number of 300 gathered around the church entrance. Father O Sullivan, accompanied by Father Morriety, made their appearance to celebrate Mass, when they were denied admittance, and threatened with violence if they made an attempt to enter. O'Sullivan took the names of those present, and said he had orders from the Bishop to excommunicate them. The announcement was received with shouts of derision. The Fathers then retired. The members of the church seem determined, and say they will resist the priests at all hazards until grievances of which they complain are rectified. No violence has taken place, but the people in the vicinity of the church are very much excited, and should the priests gain entrance to the church by strategy as they threaten, it is feared the building will be demolished over their heads, for the parishioners are desperate although very cool and orderly.

The Case of Bowen.

NEW YORK July 3—A Washington special states that the President on Saturday telegraphed to the Attorney General to make out papers for the pardon of C C Bowen, and forward them to Long Branch at once. This information was received by Bowen and he was given to understand that if the papers were sent last night he would be liberated Tuesday. On the contrary it is asserted that District Attorney Fisher who prosecuted the case and Attorney General Ackerman refused to recommend Bowen's pardon. The opinion of the Attorney General forwarded to the President last night was to that effect. Ackerman declined to give any information whatever when questioned with regard to the case.

The Darien Ship Canal.

NEW YORK July 2—Panama letters to the 20th state that the survey of the Napepi river route for the Darien Ship Canal is that factory, the route having been demonstrated practicable and that Commander Selfridge was at Panama awaiting the return of the surveying party which had ascended the Altrato river and the ship guard when the exit re expedition would sail. Should the Guard not arrive before July 3d Commander Selfridge and the officers of the expedition will proceed to New York on the steamer of that date.

NEW YORK July 3—President Grant signed the pardon of C C Bowen the bigamist yesterday. Three hundred Mormons just from Europe, left for Salt Lake Friday night, in charge of Brigham Young's son and 300 are at the quarantine.

FARM MACHINERY—The farmers of the United States annually expend $20,000 000 in reaping and mowing machines. The annual production is now estimated at about 125,000 in number.

CURRENT NOTES

It was a dangerous thing to expose a dirty hand after the Versaillist troops got possession of Paris. The soldiers examined every man they found and if his fingers betrayed that he had been handling cartridges he was shot without further ceremony or inquiry.

The New Orleans Picayune of June 27th published a two column letter from Mr Banton Duncan, urging the South to unite in demanding the nomination of General Hancock for President in 1872. The suggestion seems to meet with much favor throughout the entire South.

Four narrow gauge railroads are about to be constructed in Pennsylvania. One running from Philadelphia to a point in Chester county will have a gauge of only thirty inches another which is to cross the Alleghany Mountains will have gradients of 100 feet to the mile in several places.

The gross amount of the city debt of New York is stated at $105 058 919, and the net indebtedness at $81,[illegible]. According to figures presented in the New York Times the net debt has been increased from less than $30 000 000 on the 1st of January, 1869 to nearly $82 000 000 on the 1st of May, 1871 all favorable balances being deducted. New York is a nice place for tax payers to live in.

A fearful outrage was committed near Orleans Lawrence county, Indiana June 23d. A party of assassins attacked the house of the Moody family, consisting of four bachelor brothers, their widowed sister, and a man named Lee. They first threw jugs of benzine into the room, then several large loaded torpedoes, which exploded. The victims were aroused and ran out, when the villains commenced firing at them with revolvers. Moody was fatally shot, and the woman terribly burned. There is intense excitement among the citizens. A thousand dollars has been raised as a reward for the discovery of the assassins.

Democrats of California do not like the "New Departure." The partisan organs generally hoist the ticket, and speak approvingly of the nominees, but a cold shoulder is given to the "new departure" from the time honored principles of the Democratic party. The Amador Dispatch cannot conceal its disgust. It says: "The platform adopted by the Democratic State Convention is a very acceptable one, with the exception of the first two or three clauses which we think are a little [illegible] the new departure or [illegible] ly Democratic [illegible] that the [illegible] a platform with [illegible] with such miserable stuff."

A Woman's Love. A Two Thousand Mile Chase After a Husband

[Detroit Free Press June 16]

Yesterday morning a young wife named Christiana Nelson, carrying a two year old child in her arms, was brought to the Central Station from the Detroit and Milwaukee depot to the Chief of Police to see to getting her a railroad pass to Lawrence Mass. The wife was poorly clad, the infant was haggard and pale, and the wife had a sad story to tell. She was a factory girl at Lawrence and was married to Nelson about three years ago. The man had a good reputation for respectability and industry, and the couple lived comfortably and happily until six months ago, when Nelson became infatuated with a young girl and gradually grew morose and sullen. Three months ago in company with the girl, he fled from his home, leaving Mrs Nelson without a week's provision or a dollar in money. Much against the advice of her friends, the wife determined to pursue the pair and win back her husband. By selling off her furniture, she raised about $60, and passed through Detroit in April, having heard that Nelson was in Chicago. She remained in Chicago several days without getting a clue of his whereabouts, and then received notice that her husband was in Jackson in that State. She at once proceeded there, and found that she was on the right track. He had gone into the Missouri border. Her money being nearly exhausted, Mrs Nelson set out on foot, carrying the child in her arms, and did not pause for even a day's rest until reaching Livingston county, Mo., always a few days behind the pair, who were making for a relative of Nelson residing near Downs, in the above named county. Mrs Nelson arrived to find that the two had departed the day before for Kansas, and at this point her courage gave out. She had been without money for a week, her clothing was soiled and torn, her food and lodgings were the gift of farmers, and she made up her mind not to follow the husband further. Failing to be provided for otherwise, she took the child on her arm and started for Jackson, walking every mile, and begging food and a place to sleep. At Jackson she was sent to Chicago by the postmaster, and that official in Chicago forwarded the pair to this point arriving yesterday morning. The shoes on the woman's feet were worn as thin as paper, and there were dozens of blisters on each foot, going to show that she had walked a great distance. The child was barefoot and had a hungry, weary look which excited every one's sympathy. The woman was duly provided for, upon furnishing proofs that her story was true in the shape of several certificates, and upon returning to the depot again a purse of six or seven dollars was made up for her, and a resident of her own State just returning from a trip west made an agreement with her in the presence of a dozen passengers that he would give her a place in his family as a servant as long as she desired to stay. Almost every day one may read that a woman killed herself for love of some unworthy man but such cases exhibit more reckless despair and less womanly courage than this where a woman travels at least two thousand miles—three or four hundred of the distance on foot—to reclaim a husband who never was worthy of half her love.

The Eastern papers are making all manner of fun of the "new departure" and are illustrating its absurdities by many amusing, and pointed anecdotes. Among them is that told of a verdant looking Vermonter who appeared at the office of a chemist with a large bundle in a yellow bandanna and opening it exclaimed "There, doctor, look at that!" "Well" said the doctor "I see it." "What do you call that doctor?" "I call it iron pyrites." "What, isn't that gold?" "No," and the doctor and putting some over the fire, it evaporated up the chimney. "Wal" said the poor fellow with a woe begone look, "there's a widder woman up in our town has a whole hill full of that and I've been and married her!" Another is told of a negro on his death-bed, who declared that he wanted to "make his peace with eternity" and the the father confessor to him "Now Cesar are you quite sure you have forgiven all of your enemies? Do you freely forgive your neighbor Brown for the great injury he has you?" "I say, massa if I dies den I forgib done him, but if I gets well den dat nigger better look out for hisself, sah!"

FIVE HUNDRED SONNETS ON ONE THEME—The most ambitious of the volume of verses inspired by the military triumphs of Germany, Das Lied vom neuen Deutschen Reich, a series of 500 sonnets by Oscar Redwitz has called forth letters of acknowledgment to the author from Bismarck and Von Moltke. The former writes in a conventional and diplomatic style, but the aged General appears to envy the laurels of the great men in the past who owed nothing to these extraneous causes, "chance, fortune, fate, or the Divine ordinance," by the help of which the German army worked its miracles. It is on this ground he deprecates the excessive praise addressed to him. But think of 500 sonnets at once!

Democratic Anxiety for the Constitution

[From the New York Times]

The rural echoes of the New York Democratic Press are just now raising a great deal of noise about the Ku Klux bill. The Ohio Democrats having taken a "new departure" from the old doctrine that the late amendments to the Constitution are void and having landed on the position that they are nevertheless, to be made of no effect by legislation, the cue has been given to concentrate fire on the Ku Klux bill. The repeal of this is to be the first step taken by the victorious Democracy, if it ever becomes victorious, toward letting free its Southern brethren bound in the chains of the odious amendments. It would be as well for the Democrats of the country to remember what the Democrats of New York will never remind them of that if there had been no Ku Klux Klan, there would have been no such bill, and that if the members of that Klan in the South could be made to understand that they are detested and abhorred and not sympathized with by the Democrats of the North, the bill would be justly disarmed of its terrors, for the objects of it would cease to exist. The Ku Klux, disguise it as you will, thrive solely on the public sentiment of toleration, and that sentiment is expressed more or less directly in every utterance of Northern or Southern Democrats regarding them. They are spoken of either in a belittling or an apologetic manner, [illegible] whether they are a few lawless men actuated by a desire for plunder and violence without sympathy with the mass of the people, or they are "maddened by a sense of oppression, and hopeless of righting their wrongs by regular means." It is safe to appeal to the candid judgment of every reader of Democratic papers, North or South, if this is not the exact spirit in which the Ku Klux outrages are uniformly and universally spoken of. And it is safe to appeal to any candid Democrat, if this is not a fair expression of the feeling of the mass of his fellow partisans. There is a yet uneradicated sympathy with the South which made the Democratic Party, as a party, disloyal during the war, and which tinges Democratic feeling now toward every measure affecting the South.

It is idle, therefore, for the Democracy to seek to array public opinion against the Ku Klux bill while this obvious fact is present before the public eyes in every issue of the Democratic Press. The proceedings of the Ohio Convention, where the order for a change of base was issued, and where the Democratic attacks were openly withdrawn from the amendments and directed to legislation under the amendments, afford a striking proof of the real motive of the Democracy in attacking the Ku Klux law. Passing by the offenders, at whom the law was aimed, with a mere commonplace the Convention indicated frankly its opinion that the overturning of the law was far more desirable than the removal of the disorders. Gen McCook, who indorsed the resolutions, confessedly without having read them, or heard them, unconsciously fell into precisely the same train. The subsequent discussions in the Press have agreed with the Convention in ignoring what is certainly the most glaring instance of organized lawlessness in communities claiming to be law abiding, that the country has ever seen. Sensible people, who are asked to vote the Democratic ticket, understand this perfectly well. The zeal of these "newly-departed" for the Constitution will not blind the public to their utter indifference to the objects sought by all constitutions, the safety of personal and property rights. Their noisy professions of solicitude for the ancient liberties guaranteed by the organic law will avail little against their obvious tolerance of the tyranny of the Ku Klux—the tyranny not of usurpers but of aggressors against all legitimate authority.

Recent Affairs in Paris

Those who are prompt to condemn inconsiderately the sanguinary proceedings of the Versaillists when the Communist rebellion was quelled, will be enabled to take a calmer and more rational view of the situation in Paris and the attitude of Thiers, by reading the following very just remarks from the Nation:

Anybody who undertakes to govern Paris, if he refuses to adopt harsh or oppressive measures, like Louis Philippe, is driven out and despised as an imbecile, if he puts down disorder with a strong hand and hard heart, like Louis Napoleon and Thiers, he is pronounced a tyrant and a butcher, and this by the very men—the Communists, for instance—who in his place would have acted in a like manner. The way in which this last insurrection has been suppressed has been horrible, but any man who condemns it is bound to ask himself what he would have done in presence of the same problem. The most merciful man cannot be merciful to a foe who will not surrender, but fights on like a wild beast to the last. It is very unfair to compare Thiers' course to ours in dealing with the rebels of the late war. The Southerners were soldiers and politicians who fought under the rules of civilized warfare, and like rational beings laid down their arms when fighting was plainly useless. In judging him, we must ask ourselves how we should feel towards, and deal with a mob like that of 1863, which, while holding New York for three months against the State troops and finding themselves hard pressed should set fire to the upper part of the city, and the wharves, and the shipping and the public buildings, and seize on the Protestant ministers and hang them and open groggeries and faro banks in the principal churches and then, rejecting all terms should get into holes and corners and deal out murder on every soldier and policeman who came near the spot. We doubt if, under these circumstances, the State militia and the decent men would behave like sages or saints.

Grote, the Historian

[From the N Y Evening Mail]

The death of George Grote the distinguished historian, is an event which should call out peculiar demonstrations of sorrow and respect in this country. For although an Englishman, Mr Grote was one of the staunchest friends of democratic institutions and defended them in his great "History of Greece" with an earnestness and ability unsurpassed during his generation. The previous historians of Greece all accepted to a greater or less degree, the traditional and unfounded slurs of the monarchists and Tories—Mitford being the chief and worst—on the Democracy of Athens.

It was reserved for Mr Grote to expose those falsifications of history, and to prove beyond all doubt that most of what there was noblest in the history of Greece was identified with the prevalence of democratic ideas, and that the only bright spot on the earth's surface at one time was just that little space of ground under the shadow of the Acropolis where the "fierce democracie" of Athens were thinking great thoughts, listening to great speeches and dramas, and nourishing the germs of an undying art and literature.

Mr. Grote's vindication of the splendid fruits of Greek freedom will alone enshrine his memory among all intelligent lovers of democratic institutions. No one else has scattered to the winds so many traditional slanders about the instability, injustice and ingratitude of the "Demos" of Athens, and no one has done more to show how grand and prolific of good are the principles which are at the foundation of our Government.

Those false and weak minded Americans who talk foolishly about the vices of democratic institutions and yearn for a "strong government," can find no better, or more wholesome reading than Mr Grote's "History of Greece." If they are not predestined flunkeys that will make good Americans of them.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 4, 1871

The Anniversary of Independence.

Fourth of July discourses are pretty much all alike. Orators on that day fly the eagle to dizzy heights, and often they are unable to get him down again. In our Fourth of July discourse we shall try to be more practical. Where so much has been said there is little room to say more. Yet let us look at some practical suggestions.

In 1776 we were less than three millions. In 1871 we are nearly forty millions. How many millions will commemorate the Fourth of July a hundred years hence? At the present ratio of increase we are to have one hundred and fifty millions of people at the end of fifty years, and the child is now living who will survive to enjoy the fact. And when we include the probable and not the very remote absorption of all that part of our continent not included in our own boundaries, and now under British, French, Mexican, Spanish and Central American control, with an estimated population of over thirteen millions more, the future of our country becomes singularly interesting. Its area then will be about eight millions of square miles, more than twice the size of the continent of Europe, and nearly half as large as Asia, the cradle of the human race, the earliest seat of civilization, and the largest division of land on the face of the globe.

Such is the possible destiny of the United States; such the outgrowth of a Republican experiment virtually begun on the Fourth of July, 1776. Will that experiment endure this augmented population and territory? Such is the question frequently asked and debated. It is an awful problem, but not so formidable as the abolition of slavery, ten years ago acknowledged to be the most inexplicable and difficult of all evils of the age. That obstacle removed, and followed by the adaptation of our Constitution and laws to the new conditions of men, we anticipate our safety in the fact that nearly all the intellectual nations are rapidly assimilating themselves to our standard.

Our responsibility is upon ourselves. We are in no danger from foreign nations. Since the failure of the attempt to divide our country there need be no fear of any harm to our country, except from within The real question now is, have our people virtue and intelligence to retain what they have won, and [illegible] safely their great trust?

To-day is the key of to-morrow. What we have done—what we are doing—are the pledges that we can do as well if not better. The judgment of mankind has decided in our favor, not perhaps always with satisfaction, but because the logic of our example was resistless. All that is requisite on the part of the American people is to hold fast by the pledge of the Declaration of Independence, and to keep faith with their own consciences to educate their children—to pay their debts—to deal fairly by their neighbors—to administer their government frugally and wisely—to protect their own rights—and never to go to war except in defense of those rights. These are the foundation maxims of a system that will endure till Time shall be no more.

The material prosperity of our country is as striking as its progress in the ideas of popular government. At no former period have the people of any race enjoyed such individual and general prosperity as the people of the United States now enjoy. Such a fact as this is only less great than the progress of the nation in its knowledge of the true conditions of political society. As the country expands it solidifies. Rights are better understood and more generally enforced. The two problems, the progress of man as an individual and the progress of the whole social and political body, are rapidly being worked out together.

A Sorry Failure.

Ohio journals bring us the not unexpected intelligence that the Democratic party in that State were never in a more forlorn or despairing condition than at present. They are divided into many and diverse factions, each one of which thinks it has been basely sold and betrayed Those of the old line complain that they are called upon by the Montgomery county and Columbus platforms to endorse the doctrine of negro equality, and that their glorious traditions are dishonored and disgraced. The young bloods feel that they have been sold by the variations in the State platform and the refusal of McCook to endorse it. The few Republicans, too, who were cajoled into a support of the Democracy on the new question, feel that they have been badly sold, and are retracing their steps toward their "first love," being persuaded by the events of the past few weeks that it was better for them when held in her embrace than it is now.

Alexander H. Stephens has become editor of a paper in Georgia. He is writing furlongs of editorials in support of the position that the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution are not valid parts of that instrument, these having been carried by a violent displacement of the regular governments of the Southern States and the erection in their stead of military despotism." So much for the "new departure" of the Democratic party in the region which has always been and must always be its stronghold. The President and Vice-President of the Confederacy are still the controlling minds of the Southern Democracy and their views of the situation are now before the public.

All the Democratic papers are full of reproaches of Jeff. Davis for opening his mouth on politics. Not that they disapprove what he says, but they fear his utterances will "hurt the party." If they had censured him one-half as much in time of the war for trying to "hurt his country," they would have done the country a real service. But not a word of censure then escaped them.

The Herald says that the Democratic party will test the validity of the Constitutional amendments before the highest tribunal in the land, and at the same time it endorses the "new departure" resolutions which call the amendments "dead issues." But this is quite as consistent as the Herald ever is.

The New York Tribune reckons among the cheapest lots sold of late those Republicans who turned their coats because of their aversion to Negro Suffrage, and are now summoned to unite in the new departure.

The Louisville Courier Journal thinks the New Departure may not win this fall. It says the "Bourbons" are beginning to sulk and dabble in ill predictions, and that they are already organizing to defeat the Democrats in Ohio and Pennsylvania. "If the New Departure does not win this fall," they say "it will be a sign that it ought not to have been made, and an admonition to take the back track." Very ingenious.

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, July 3.—Early this morning a stabbing affray took place on the corner of Commercial and Kearney streets. It originated in a drunken row in which one Hughes was fatally cut. He is now in a dying condition. His assailant, Lawrence McLaughlin, was arrested.

It is rumored that the Elliott vs Holladay suit, involving title to the Oregon Railroad (some seven millions at issue) has been amicably settled.

The clipper ship Young America, belonging to Geo. Howes & Co, of this city, made the trip hence to New York in 86 days—one of the best on record.

Some slight effort was made to get up curb stone stock sales to-day in the absence of the regular board, but there were few operations, no one caring to buy or sell. Business of all kinds has been at a standstill to-day. The city is ablaze with fire-works this evening, some Chinese firms on Sacramento street outdoing everybody else in that line.

During the passing of the Papal procession, vitriol was thrown from a balcony on Montgomery street, upon people passing below. The police believing that an attempt had been made to throw it upon some prominent party in the procession, investigated the matter to-day, and arrested John Hay, a druggist, who admits having the vitriol, but says he was merely feeling with it, when it fell from his hands accidentally. The matter has caused some feeling and a charge has been made against him.

Thos. Johnson was arrested this evening on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder.

Geo. W. Brooks, who drove the hotel carriage which ran over and killed Charles Hurd, Saturday night, has been arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

This evening Judge McKinstry assaulted Charles DuYoung of the Chronicle with a cane, on Clay street, for a scurrilous allusion to his wife in the serial gossip of yesterday's paper. Parties interfered before he had inflicted serious injury.

Geo. H. Wright, a well known livery stable keeper, Murato Arch and Wm. Byrne, were sent to the insane asylum to-day.

NEVADA.

VIRGINIA, July 3.—The Sutro Tunnel Commissioners, who arrived here last week, are busily engaged in their investigations. They took a trip to the tunnel to-day and appear highly pleased with the country and impressed with the magnitude of our mining interests. Their stay will probably be prolonged two months.

The Supreme Court at Carson has reversed the decision of the lower court in the case of the Ophir Silver Mining Company vs. Carpenter and Birdsall and ordered a new trial.

John M. Burnett was this evening elected President of the Board of Education.

The sea lioness and whelp, fur seal and a sea dog, captured for Barnum, left on the steamer for New York to-day. The agent of a Chicago museum offered $2,000 for a half interest in them last week.

Taylor, Vanderbilt and Stewart.

The New York correspondent of the Troy Times says:

Having referred to industry as the chief necessity to sweeten existence, let me add something upon the laborious habits of some of our leading business men. Many young men look forward to the time when they shall be released from labor, and they have a notion that the rich men of this city lead what is called an "easy life." This idea is very erroneous. Our successful men not only have, but continue to be, hard workers. It is true there are persons who have inherited wealth, and therefore yield themselves to indolence and dissipation, but their experiences quickly prove the truth of the old saying, that the fool and his money are soon parted. Our rich business men work because habit has become second nature, and they would be miserable if they were idle. We have no rich drones, for a drone would never become rich. Let us look at the industry of a few of our self-made men. Here is who is about three score and ten, and is estimated at five millions. Surely, such a man, one might say, ought to rest. So far from this, however, he is almost as busy as ever. He was noted as an active and far-sighted merchant, and ever since he retired from trade he has found enough to do in the vast field of finance. Taylor is President of the City Bank, which is one of the heaviest of our Wall street institutions. He would be extremely miserable if he did not visit that bank every day, and spend an hour overlooking its operations in a manner which some men would call laborious. After this is done, one may meet him in the Wall street crowd, that form, lithe and erect, and that penetrating countenance, which seems as much on the alert as when he was a poor clerk. Four o'clock finds him at his home, with a racked brain and a weary body, but a fine dinner restores his tone, and after an hour of social small talk and a drive to the park, he retires to his private office and enters into a deep and vexatious calculation which continues until bedtime. Do you inquire what it can be that drives a rich man so intensely? I reply he has a large number of vacant lots which should be covered with houses, and the architects' plans and the builders' contracts are to be examined. He has extensive tracts of coal lands for which mining companies are negotiating. He has shares in banks, in gas companies, and in other stocks, all of which must be looked after. And if he does not finish his work as rapidly as each day brings it before him, it would soon accumulate in a very burdensome manner. Such, then, is the life of a five million man:

THE COMMODORE.

He has worked hard for more than sixty years. Of late he has abated the intensity of his application, but still labors from five to six hours a day in a very close manner. He has just completed the greatest railway depot for travelers in this city, and this is a mate to the great freight depot in St. John's Park. The Commodore must work to save himself from sheer misery. Idleness would be to him the greatest of misfortunes. He is also determined that his children shall be working men. The largest part of his property will come into their hands, and he knows that it is only industrious habits that can keep them in its possession. To such a man as the Commodore the idea of retirement is repulsive. Activity is his life, and business is an elysium. Each day brings its excitements, either of loss or of gain, and at its close he feels the pleasures resulting from exercise of the faculties both of body and mind.

STEWART

It is well known that this man is a marvel of industry. Like Vanderbilt, he is about seventy-five, but he looks much younger than the former. Vanderbilt may have felt the impelling consciousness of a family to sharpen his application, but Stewart has "neither chick nor child." He works in simple obedience to his nature, which demands it. Stewart and Vanderbilt are the great exponents of two departments of business, the one being a merchant prince, and the other a railway king. I do not know that they have ever met, and the greatness of this city is shown by containing two such men without collision of interests. It is the opinion of good judges of character that if Stewart had been bred to military life he would have been the greatest General of the age. What would not have been accomplished by such method and such industry? Having reached old age, and with a property estimated at from thirty to fifty millions, he must still do a day's work.

Another Fierce Blast at the New Departure

[From the Columbus (Ga.) Sun, June 17]

We believe the new departure is utterly wrong in principle, and a fatal error in policy. Before the new departure the Democratic party was a unit, and the Republicans were greatly divided upon the reconstruction of the Southern States. The injustice, unconstitutionality and gross usurpation was beginning to be in every section admitted. We all begun to appreciate the fact that the object our wise forefathers intended to secure and perpetuate was that all general interests should be left under one common government, and all local or sectional interests should remain with the State or sections to which they belong. This was the key-stone of the arch. By the new departure we surrender this mighty principle. We say Congress and not the States can regulate suffrage. That the President can in peace suspend the writ of habeas corpus, or in other words, that Congress can, by an act in express violation of our Great Charter, force an unwilling people at the point of the bayonet into rebellion or the most abject servitude.

To escape this conclusion, see to what inconsistences we are now forced by Radical arguments. We are compelled to say that our "accept the situation" now is hypocritical, or that our late opposition was founded on error. Are we to fight on the old, well-marked and selected line, or in the hour of victory to ground our arms and march prisoners, bag and baggage, horse, foot and artillery, into the camp of the enemy? No! will leap as loudly from the lips of millions as the red live lightning leaps from its fiery home.

We wish to "agitate," because we believe the storms of freedom are better than the calms of despotism. We wish to speak with no double tongue; we wish not to worship any two-faced Janus. We believe when God places an individual or nation in a situation that a he must be spoken or acted to save life, then the time is come when that individual or nation should die.

We hear much said about policy. Policy is but another name for deceit. It has destroyed more men and nations than it ever saved. It is only the false homage paid to virtue by vice. It is easier to be, than seem to be. If Radicalism is true, let us "accept the situation" in good faith; if false, let us make no new departure, but fight it boldly to the bitter end. We are told by the highest authority that the end never justifies the means. However noble the end, it should be should be sacrificed when demanded by truth, justice and honor.

The Conservative organ in Wilmington, North Carolina, says of the New Departure: "We are going to throw up our hats and huzza for a movement which excuses, to say the least, all the injustice and the suffering which we have endured patiently and silently. All we desire is to be let alone. We request that our feelings shall be respected. We demand that we shall not be insulted."

A FAMILY REMEDY.—No family should be without some efficacious remedy for the cure of affections, so universally prevalent as coughs and colds—some remedy, too, which can be relied upon as safe, sure and certain. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry combines this desideratum.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 4, 1871.

CITY.

FIFTEEN DAYS LOST IN THE MOUNTAINS.—During the last week of May, a young man who had been for a long time employed in the Oregon [illegible] Works, went to the Dalles to work. After getting there, having a few days time on hand before beginning work, he concluded to take a stroll about the country back of the Dalles. He started on the 30th of May, on foot. Toward night when he thought to return or find a house for shelter he discovered that he was quite uncertain as to the points of compass—in short, he was lost in the foothills of the Cascade mountains. He slept on the ground without any shelter, and next day [illegible] his efforts to find himself, or rather to find some human habitation. This day's work was like the preceding one, fruitless, and the young man, being without food, began to feel exhaustion coming on. One day followed another in the vain effort to find his way out, and finally on the tenth day, he arrived upon the summit of a high mountain, from which he got sight of Mt Hood, and away in another direction, a long bright line of light which he took to be water. He started to go to it, and after five days of hard labor, hunger, thirst and exhaustion, he reached the stream and found himself on the bank of the Columbia river about three miles above the Dalles. He had now been out fifteen days with[illegible] food, except such berries as he managed to find, and he thinks he did not eat more than a pint of berries. He was reduced almost to a skeleton, and was evidently close upon the verge of insanity which follows upon protracted hunger and hardship. He says that when he laid down to rest, which he had often to do on account of exhaustion, the coyotes came around him, seeming to understand his feeble condition and to be impatient for the moment, when reduced to entire helplessness, he should fall a prey to their ravenous appetites. When he would get up again, the wolves would fall back, but continue to lurk around and follow him. Toward the last, he had frequent spells of being entirely blind, which lasted sometimes for an hour, or a half hour. Upon arriving at the river, he shortly found a house and got something to eat, of the [illegible], the man of the house being absent. She, [illegible] refused to let him sleep in the house, so he went and slept in a little barn. Next day he started for the Dalles, but he was so weak that it took the whole day making the distance of only [illegible]. He arrived back at this city about a week ago. His personal appearance indicated the truth of his story, and we are assured that he is a [illegible] young man.

TO-DAY.—The only exercises in this city in honor of the national holiday, will be the [illegible] and marching of the militia companies and Society of Mexican veterans, and the firing of salutes. The marching column will form at the Court House at ten o'clock. It will be headed by the 23d Infantry band, and will march through some of the principal streets and then proceed to East Portland Park. National salutes will be fired at sunrise, noon and sundown. All [illegible] above proceedings will be each man, woman or child on his or her own hook. It is [illegible], however, that most business houses will be [illegible], and ordinary avocations suspended.

[illegible] WANTED.—There ought to be no [illegible] among common laborers about getting [illegible]. Gen Sprague wants woodchoppers on the line of the N. P. Railroad, near Cowlitz, [illegible], contractor on the O. & C. Railroad, [illegible] for one thousand men to work on the road south of Eugene City. With [illegible] to get employment it would seem that there should be no idle men. The fact probably is [illegible] part of the idling growlers about [illegible] are men who would not work if a job [illegible] them, with iced lemonades thrown [illegible].

[illegible] PAYS YOUR MONEY AND TAKES YOUR [illegible].—The people intent upon celebrating to-day will have a chance to select from a half dozen different localities. There is an excursion by [illegible], an excursion to Oregon City by [illegible], an excursion to East Portland by ferry boat, and an excursion, just as you can catch [illegible] to the hill tops south of the city. Besides these, if anybody wants to put in a hard day's work, they can walk up to the Mountain [illegible].

THE U S GRAND JURY.—The following named persons compose the Grand Jury of the U. S. District Court, now in session: William Whitman, J [illegible] Ford, Jonathan Jackson, Ezra Scoville, [illegible] Claggett, B O Severance, E. Wingate, [illegible], R. W. Crandall, Vic. Trevitt, N. B. [illegible], A. W. Ferguson, Alex. McCourt, W. [illegible], William Kane, John Hobsch, James [illegible], James Taylor, E Chichester, W. Simpson, [illegible] J. C. Kingsley.

[illegible] TRUE.—There is a San Francisco telegram [illegible] that it is reported the suits pending [illegible] Holladay and Elliott have been amicably [illegible]. LIBRARY FOR AMERICANS.—All those that desire to keep up with the times and along with the world, must be the possessor of a library of some magnitude. And it is a lamentable fact that so many have not such, when an outlay of a few hundred dollars, or a thousand at most, would procure it. The time is fast approaching when it will be expected that every man of significance at the zenith of life will have his shelves well filled with useful knowledge.

But those that have not a thousand dollars to expend for books, or time to read them when purchased, can procure, at a small outlay, The Great American Cyclopedia, or University Library. In this they get an excellent substitute for a library, and it is also almost indispensable to those that have one, for in it is collected from all the libraries and distinguished authors throughout the world, all the practical information on every conceivable subject that a man has occasion to record, think or desire information upon—with the whole digested, stripped of all irrelevant and unnecessary matter, and arranged in alphabetical order, enabling him to command in a moment any information on all subjects within the range of human knowledge—with an enormous store of statistical matter added, continue to make it a treasure for all.

A SERIOUS RUNAWAY.—Last evening a horse driven by Mrs. O. P. Bacon, became frightened at an engine drawn rapidly and suddenly round a corner on Front street, near the O. S. N. Co's block, and ran away. Running down Front street, the horse ran against a half breed and injured him very severely. A little further on, Mrs. Bacon's little girl who was in the buggy with her, was thrown out by the buggy striking a sidewalk curb. She received a slight cut in the face but was not much otherwise hurt. The horse ran then up Ash street to Second and for a short distance up Second, when it was brought to a stand by colliding with a maple shade tree. We could not learn whether Mrs. Bacon received any serious injury, though it was said she, too, was thrown out of the buggy. The half breed was taken first into the Shakespeare hotel and afterward to the Wisconsin hotel. He was badly hurt.

MEETING OF THE MEXICAN VETERANS.—The Mexican Veterans held a meeting last evening at the Court House, Maj Gen. Canby in the Chair. The report of the committees appointed to confer with the military forces of the State, was read and adopted. The committee reported that two carriages had been engaged for the use of the officers of the Society, who were to march in the procession. Some debate was elicited as to what position the Veterans should occupy in line. A motion was finally carried that they would occupy such a position in the line as the Commander of the State forces should be pleased to give them. After the signing of the Constitution by such as had not already done so, and the election of Andrew Jackson Marsh, Esq, of the San Francisco Veterans, as an honorary member, the meeting adjourned to meet at half-past ten o'clock this morning at the Court House.

VIEWS OF THE VALLEY.—Mr. Carl Bosco returned on Sunday from a week's trip up the O. & C. Railroad. He went on a view taking tour as far up as Harrisburg, and took about thirty views—railroad bridges, and trestles, noted landscapes, buildings, etc. They are all of the stereoscopic sort and will be published and for sale in a few days. Mr. Bosco will shortly take another trip for a similar purpose in another direction.

ANOTHER SCORCHER.—Yesterday the weather furnace was heated something over seven times seven times—the day was a scorcher. At 2 o'clock and at 3 o'clock, the mercury 91° in the shade, and the shade was frigid compared with "the roasting heat of the unprotected out-of doors. It was a good day to go for "a lodge in some vast wilderness."

NO PAPER TO-MORROW.—In conformity with the usual custom, everybody connected with this newspaper establishment will have an opportunity to celebrate to day, and as labor and celebrating are incompatible, there will be no paper issued to-morrow morning.

PRINTERS' THANKS.—The thirsty prints were made glad last evening by the receipt of some liquids from Pat Coakley.

How We Used to be Physicked.

Who does not remember the time when spring purgation was considered indispensable to summer health! No matter for wry faces the inevitable salts and senna, rhubarb or calomel and jalap must be administered. These spring medicines the youngsters were told, were to keep them hale and hearty during the summer. We all know now that this was a fallacy that new vigor, not depletion is what is required at the commencement of the summer solstice. As a preparation for the enervating effects of oppressive summer weather a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is highly expedient. This famous vegetable preparation has three prominent properties. It renovates, purifies and regulates all the functions of the body. It is composed exclusively of pure vegetable productions viz the essential principle of Monongahela Rye and the most efficacious tonic and alterative roots, barks and gums known to medical botanists. Hence, it is an absolutely safe medicine, and no tincture of the Pharmacopoeia can compare with it either in purity or in the variety of its objects, and its comprehensive results. Happily for mankind, the theory that it was necessary to prostrate a patient in order to cure him is forever exploded and the true philosophical doctrine, that vigor is the great antagonist of disease, has taken its place. Hostetter's Bitters is an invigorant and hence it is the proper medicine for the feeble at this most trying season of the year.

Be sure that you obtain the genuine article as there are innumerable vile imitations in the market. Look to the ornamental stamp, the engraved label and the name blown into the glass. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is sold in bottles only.

MILLS SEMINARY.

REV. C. T. MILLS AND WIFE, FOR the past six years Principals of the Young Ladies' Seminary at Benicia, are happy to announce to their patrons and friends that the next term of their well known Institution, will open

Wednesday, August 2, 1871,

In their New Commodious and Beautiful Building just completed at SEMINARY PARK, BROOKLYN.

As most of the able and experienced corps of Teachers with valuable accessions, as well as the fine classes of pupils now pursuing their studies remove with them, the School remains essentially unchanged, with greatly increased facilities for physical comfort and intellectual culture without additional expense. Mr and Mrs Mills believe they can accomplish much more for their pupils in the future than they have been able to do in the past and that this Institution offers unrivalled advantages for a thorough and finished education.

All communications relating to admission and all letters of inquiry should be addressed to Ninety-Nine in the Shade.

Oh! for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers,
Oh! for an iceberg or two at control;
Oh! for a vale which at mid-day the dew cumbers,
Oh! for a pleasure trip up to the Pole.

Oh! for a little one-story thermometer;
With nothing but zeroes ranged in a row;
Oh! for a big double-barreled hydrometer,
To measure this moisture that rolls from my brow.

Oh! that this cold world were twenty times colder,
(That's irony red hot, it seemeth to me;)
Oh! for a turn of its dreaded cold shoulder;
Oh! what a comfort an ague would be.

Oh! for a grotto to typify Heaven,
Scooped in the rock under cataract vast;
Oh! for a winter of discontent even;
Oh! for wet blankets judiciously cast.

Oh! for a chill that would be perpetual,
(Or at least last till the summer is o'er;)
Then the fever may come as effectual,
And last till winter is with us no more.

The Strangest Adventure.

"Yes, I could tell you plenty of stories like that; I've seen a few adventures in my time."

"You have indeed; but won't you give me a few more? It's early yet."

We were sitting in the half demolished summer-house of a little village inn on the coast of Brittany—in all probability the only wakeful inhabitants of the whole place, for sitting up till eleven P. M. is an enormity unknown in that primitive region. My companion's swarthy face and tangled black beard, seen beneath the uncertain light of the rising moon, might have made him appear to any person of unsteady nerves, rather an "uncanny" comrade for a midnight tête-a-tete; but, in spite of his repellant manner and miner-like roughness of speech, there was an indescribable something in his tone and bearing which convinced that, however he might have fallen, or been forced into his present nondescript way of life, he had (to use the common phrase) "been a gentleman once." This, however, was mere conjecture on my part; for, in all the marvelous diorama of personal adventure which he had spread before me—riotous revels in Australian taverns, succeeded by days of deadly peril in Antarctic seas; fights with pirates in the straits of Malacca, following upon weeks of luxurious indolence among the lotus-eaters of Brazil; sledge drives across Russian steppes, and bear hunts in American forests—there was not the slightest hint at his early life or original station in society. It was at the close of a vivid description of a hurricane off Cape Horn that my Ulysses paused in his narrative, and I now reiterated my request for another page from his eventful autobiography.

"What! not tired yet? It's not every one that can stand hearing a fellow talk so about himself."

"Well," said I, "I'll only ask you for one more—tell me the strangest adventure you ever had."

The wanderer started slightly, and then said in an altered voice: "You've made a better bargain than you think for; I will tell you the strangest of all, and let us see how you like it. I don't ask you to believe it, because I know that when you put these sorts of things into books, people laugh, and talk about Baron Munchausen, and all that. I've read the Baron," he went on, noticing my look of surprise, "and many another book that you'd never give me credit for; but in a book this story I'm going to tell you would be impossible, and it's just because it seems impossible that it's true."

"'Truth is strange—stranger than fiction,' says Byron," interrupted I, speaking lightly in order to dissipate the effect involuntarily produced upon me by the terrible earnestness of the man's tone and manner.

"I've read Byron, too," he rejoined, "though you mayn't think it. That description of the sunset in Greece was always a favorite bit of mine.

But I must get to my story. You remember how those two fellows robbed my tent, and how I fired all the six barrels of my revolver into them as they ran off? Well, it was just after that job that I shifted my tent away from the rest, thinking I'd be more comfortable by myself for a bit. You'll say that this was rather venturesome, after I'd been robbed once already; but then you see these beauties that I fired at thought they'd fairly cleaned me out. Nobody knew that I'd got a lot more buried under a big gum-tree some two hundred yards off; so the whole camp thought I was dry, and you may be sure I did not undeceive them. Well, I moved my tent up to the tree where the gold was, and there I staid; but I still stuck to my digging to make up for what I'd lost. I got a middling lot of dust every day, but I took care to let nobody see more than I could help, so folks got to think I was down on my luck and left off minding about me at all.

One night I'd been working pretty late, and got chilled right through; and though I rolled my blanket well round me after turning into my hammock, I couldn't get warm anyhow and so I shivered away till I fell asleep. Then I fell to dreaming that I was in a trance, like some man I once read about in America and that they thought me dead, and were going to bury me. I tried my hardest to move or scream out, or something, but no good; and I heard the coffin-lid slap to, and the first spadeful of earth fall on it, and then I awoke.

It was a fine bright morning, and through the opening of the tent I could see the sun shining and all the picks and cradles getting to work as usual. But my dream wasn't all gone, for I felt as if I were bound down and couldn't move an inch; and yet it wasn't quite that, either—it was more as if I had no substance left, but was all air and shadow. If ever a living man felt like a ghost, I did then.

"At first I didn't think of being frightened—just at first. I felt more put out and foolish, like a man who's had a tumble, or got splashed all over by a cart. I seemed so queer for a great strong fellow like me to be laid by the heels that way, and at first the thought of it almost made me laugh; so there I lay like a log for ever so long, listening to all the noises from the camp, till at last (about noon it must have been, by the sun) I began to feel hungry, and began to look very hard at my 'damper' and cold mutton, which lay upon a box at the other side of the tent. 'Well,' thought I, 'it's a queer thing for a man to be starved to death with food before his eyes!' But the moment I thought it, something cold seemed to clutch my heart and squeeze it all together. I tried to put it away by saying to myself, 'This'll go off soon—of course it will:' but at that minute it flashed across me, as if some one had written it in letters of living fire all over the place, 'And supposing it doesn't go off—what then?'

"It was then I began to feel frightened for the first time. I turned sick all at once as if I were going to die, and likely enough I may have fainted, for the next thing I remember, there was a great silence all over the camp; and by that I knew the men were having their dinner, and that it must be late in the afternoon. As night came on I began to feel very bad every way. So long as the sun was shining, and the sound of the picking and shoveling went on, the light and the noise, and the feeling of having lots of people close to me, kept me up a bit; but when the sound died away little by little, and the darkness came all round as if it were locking me in, I felt as cast down and helpless as a child lost in a great town. However, my hunger made me savage-like, and that held me up; for so long as there's strength enough for anger in a man, he's got a chance; it's when he can't feel savage that his heart is broken. Only I kept always wishing that something would break the silence; and at last something did with a vengeance, for a lot of the horrible dingoes commenced howling. And so they kept on, and worked me up till I felt as if I'd give anything to have just one blow at them, no matter what came after; for what with the hunger, and the lying still so long, and the howling of these brutes, I got so mad that I'd have liked to kill something, no matter what it was. And so the night wore away—a dreary night for me!"

While he was speaking the moon had become gradually obscured, and we were wrapped in a shadowy dimness that harmonized well with the gloomy recital, to which the deepening sombreness of his tone lent additional horror.

"The sun rose at last, but it brought no bright morning hope with it; only the same weary helplessness, which seemed as if it had lasted for days and days—for I had lost all count of time. When the noise of the digging began again, I almost wished it would leave off, much as I had wished for it before; for it sent a kind of horror through me to think of the hundreds of men so near, any one of whom would have run like lightning to help me, if he'd only known of the scrape I was in—while I lay dumb and dying close by. Ay, dying! it was no use shamming hopeful any longer; for now I began to feel a gnawing and tugging in my inside, as if the teeth of a wolf were tearing it, and I knew what that meant; for I'd felt it before, only not so bad. I wouldn't have minded so much if I could have screamed, or flung myself about, or anything to show what I felt; but to lie there stockstill and speechless, it was horrible!"

A shudder, which I could see in the uncertain light, shook his strong frame as he proceeded.

"As the sun grew hotter, the flies began to swarm; and as I watched them, it struck me all of a sudden, what a way I should be in supposing they attacked me, for, as I was then, they might have sucked every drop of my blood before I could have stirred a finger. I knew something of what Australian bush-flies could do, for I'd once stumbled on the body of a shepherd who had been tied to a tree by the bushrangers, and left. However, luckily for me, there was something else, in the tent that tempted them more, and that was the food I'd left lying on the log. In a second they were down on it; all the meat turned black at once, as if with a shower of soot, and their buzzing was like the wind blowing through a row of wires. You'd laugh at me, stranger, if I were to tell you how savage that sight made me; for, of course, you'll say I ought to have been mighty glad to get off so cheap; but, oh! to see those accursed vermin gorging themselves before my eyes, while I, a man, lay starving! I tell you, all that I felt before was nothing to it!

"Toward afternoon, there began a kind of whispering and humming in my ears, getting louder bit by bit. It wasn't the flies, for they were all gone; it was what comes to one on the second or third day of starving to death, and I knew it. Some of my mates that were starved up country used to keep putting their hands to their ears for awhile before they died, saying they heard something whispering to them. It got stronger and stronger, till the sound seemed to shape itself into an old song that a man I was with in Brazil kept crooning over just before he died. The song was all about a party going across the desert to look for some men that were lost; but the verse that rang in my head then was this;

'And never a man, and never a beast
They met on their desolate way;
But the bleaching bones in the hungry sand
Said all that a tongue could say.'

And so it kept going over and over, till at last I fairly went off—half slept and half fainted.

"It was late when I awoke, and I can't tell you how I felt at seeing the sun setting again. As the light faded, I felt as if my life was going out along with it, and when it dipped below the horizon, I was ready to start up and stretch out my arms to hold it back, if I'd had the strength. And such a night as that second night was, good Heaven! There's a verse somewhere in the Bible that speaks of 'a horror of great darkness;' I learned it at school, but I never knew what it really meant till then. This time there was no howling of dingoes, no noise of any sort; all was deadly still, as if the world itself, with all that lived and breathed in it, were dead, and I alone kept living—living on. I suppose I must have been getting light-headed with hunger and weakness, because I began to fancy all sorts of queer things. First I thought I was nailed down in a coffin, and that if I could only move or scream, or even speak, the lid would fly open; but I couldn't. Then it seemed as if I were at the bottom of the sea, and the weight of water pressed me down till I could hardly breathe. All at once I was startled out of my fancies by a sound close to the tent, the like of which I never heard before or since—a low moaning cry, that sounded like 'All alone! all alone!' over and over again. I can't tell to this day whether I really heard it or only fancied it; but at the time it gave me such a horror that I nearly went mad.

"The third morning came and found me nearly at my last. The gnawing pain was gone, and instead of it had come a pleasant drowsiness, like what a man feels when he falls down to sleep in the snow. All the morning I lay in a kind of a dream, thinking of nothing, fearing nothing—as quiet as a child at its mother's breast; till all at once I saw something that roused me in good earnest—a black, shining thing, like a long strip of velvet, coming gliding into the tent. I knew it directly for one of the deadliest snakes in Australia. The next moment I heard the rustle of its coils up the tent pole to which my hammock was slung, and then I saw its flat head and black beady eyes hanging over me, and looking right down into my face to see if I were dead or not. I suppose it thought I was, for the next moment it slid down over my face, to and fro along the hammock, till at last it went to the other pole, and there it glided off, and I saw no more of it. Anybody watching me then would have called me a brave fellow; but I dare say it's not the first time that a man has been thought brave because he couldn't run away!

"I don't know how long it was after that—it may have been an hour, or a day, or a week, for all I could tell—that a shadow fell across my face, and I heard a voice calling out, "Halloa, mate! can you give us a firestick? I've let my fire go out!" With the sound of that voice all my love of life came back again, and I gathered up my strength to try and speak.

"Seeing me lying there so white and still, the fellow must have thought me dead; and for a moment—the bitterest moment I ever had—I thought he was going to turn and go out again; but, although I couldn't speak, I managed just to move my eyelids, and he saw it. He said nothing, but raised my head on his arm and took out his flask to pour some rum into my mouth, and then I knew that I was saved, and with the shock of the reaction I fainted in right earnest."

Here my strange companion suddenly ceased, and rising from his chair, said to me: "You've had your story, stranger, and now I'm going to bid you good night, for I haven't spoke of this business since it befel, and it rather upsets me thinking of it. You tell me you're off early to-morrow morning, so it's a hundred to one if we ever meet again; but in any case, I wish you success in your travels, and may you end better than I have done."

Then, grasping my hand with a force that made it tingle to the wrist, he departed.

His parting words words were true, for we have never met since that night; but should these lines ever meet his eye, it may gratify him to know there is at least one man in the world who fully believes his story, even though it be (as he styled it) "the strangest adventure of all."

All orders from the Interior, Oregon and Washington Territory, or any place on the Pacific Coast, attended to with promptness and dispatch.

Mr. SIMS appreciates the past liberal patronage of his friends, and trusts he may continue to merit it in the future. For the information of strangers he would say that he feels confident that his experience in his particular calling is surpassed by none on this coast, which his superior work, sent to almost every town in California, Oregon, Victoria, and Sandwich Islands, and to be seen on some of the best buildings of San Francisco fully attest.

Also—A very large lot of Second Hand Shutters, of various dimensions, all for sale at very low rates.

Mr. E. M. BURTON, Portland Oregon, will forward orders for work of all kinds free of charge. je9d3m
